A CHANGE IN LIGHT

SWITCHING THE ENGINEERING EDUCATION FROM LOCKDOWN ERA TO VACCINATION ERA

Our nation has always welcomed the change and utilized it to enhance the country in one way or another. Changes like a self-reliant India, the launch of Chandrayaan-2, and many other things strengthened India's economy on a big scale. But this change was a little different, a pandemic which changed everything that anyone could ever expect: completely switching to an online medium. From physical classes to online classes, every single bit of our schedule took a big turn. With the new ray of hope of vaccination, we are again ready to conduct physical classes.

Lots has to, and will, change in the field of education, and learning, in the weeks, months, and years to come. One thing is for sure. We are never going to go back to the 'pre-crisis' era. That is now behind us. We will have to let go of the syllabus as it existed before; we will have to somewhat re-learn the 'normal/expected' order of classroom teaching; we will have to re-think contact hours; we will have to re-visit the notion of everyone having to do the same thing; we will have to recalibrate control and authority; we will have to question assumptions about what students want; we will have to tone down suspicions about student integrity; we will have to huddle together to discuss "covering the content" and "content delivery"; and of course we will have to correct perceptions about students' access to technology and teachers' relationship with the same.

Concurrently, educationists will have to latch on to caring for students as whole people; fostering community and connections that facilitate learning; working to understand each student's context; collaborating with students on their learning; learning from students; responding with flexibility; engaging in conversations about the 'difficulty of now'; challenging students to learn, not just ride out the semester; avoiding isolation and collaboration within faculties; and using students and teaching colleagues as resources and sounding boards.

Tomorrow will be a new dawn. What we make of it is entirely in our own hands. Change is desirable; change is inevitable. Change in fact has been forced upon us. Whether we use the opportunity to advantage or let it pass us by will decide whether the future will shock us or we will create shock-absorbers that will in fact use the impact to cushion us in our journey to a better tomorrow.

I am sure that SISTec-Ratibad is ready with Shock-absorbers!!!
